Aisthesis Call for Submissions:
An Opportunity for Honors Students to Publish Their Work

What is Aisthesis?
Established in 2008, Aisthesis is an annual, online periodical published by the University Honors Program at the University of Minnesota Duluth. Each year, students in the UMD Honors Program seek contributions from undergraduate students in Honors Programs across the country. Faculty members in various disciplines assist the editorial board in reading and reviewing submissions.

What’s in it for us at Aisthesis?
Our goal at Aisthesis is to create and share an honors-focused compilation of compelling scholarly and creative works. We seek submissions that broaden our understanding of an issue, challenge us to see the world from another perspective, and inspire us to pursue new lines of inquiry.

Submission Requirements and Guidelines:
Eligibility: Authors must be undergraduate honors students enrolled in a university-level honors program/college. Work submitted by recent honors alumni will also be considered. Previously published work will not be reviewed by the Aisthesis committee. Simultaneous submissions are welcome; however, if your work has been accepted elsewhere, please withdraw your submission by emailing Rebecca Boyle at rjboyle@d.umn.edu.

Genres: Aisthesis invites submissions in all academic disciplines of research. Creative submissions of nonfiction, fiction, poetry, visual art, and photography are also encouraged from any undergraduate student enrolled in a university honors program. In addition, works that challenge traditional discipline and genre boundaries are welcome.

Word Count: Less than 5000 words for all genres

Submission deadline: March 15, 2017
